1. [ ] reeled off the following comments on reference subject at our meeting in his apartment at noon on 31 October. DWORCZAK was a top local FIS principal agent being run out of Innsbruck. About six months ago, he was briefed by his French superior to move ahead on local Soviet targets. He made contact and, according to SARVARY, within the past two months received a verbal EEI from a Soviet contact which he subsequently recorded in his operational notes.

2. All of DWORCZAK'S papers were picked up by the State Police from his XIV Bezirk room and were turned over to [ ] by PETERLUNGER. After the abortive attempt to abduct SARVARY, a British Intelligence Service Hungarian-language speaker was drafted from the zone to pour over DWORCZAK'S documents, and after two weeks' work, he is completing a detailed report full of interesting operational disclosures. [ ] feels that [ ] would probably be willing to give [ ] a copy of this report if Lagenham requested it.

3. The French Intelligence Service have been hounding PETERLUNGER for DWORCZAK'S papers, and they will be given most of them this week. The British have elected to keep a few originals. Not found in the batch was the Soviet EEI which DWORCZAK is said to have typed. PETERLUNGER was questioned on the disappearance of this item and he contended that the State Police did not find it at the pickup. SARVARY learned from another French Intelligence Service agent named HUBER (fnu) or ROBERT (fnu), that PETERLUNGER passed this document directly to a Vienna French Intelligence Service official. PETERLUNGER recently denied that this was the case when he was queried on the subject by [ ]

4. SARVARY turned himself into a XIII FSS installation after the abduction attempt and he has since been provided subsistence while being interrogated by the British.

5. According to [redacted], there is no question that DWORCZAK was the fingerman in this attempt at abduction unless the affair was a cleverly staged and Soviet-directed operation from start to finish. [redacted] is disinclined to accept this possibility.

6. An FSS source named CEPEK (fnu - phonetic), who ordinarily turns in reports on KPOs matters, unexpectedly came up with a tip that DWORCZAK was hiding in a building situated in back of an FSS installation in the III Bezirk. The FSS are now investigating this lead.
